

“My work is performance-oriented and development-oriented. I try and bring the benefits of the learning into the here and right now rather than associating it with a misty future. Coaching moves the organisation forward as well as the client.”

With a background in senior management and strategic consulting, Dr Rosie Miller brings a powerful combination of practical experience and broad commercial vision to her work. She focuses both on the individual’s and the organisation’s needs and agendas to create development plans that are directly linked to the working challenges and delivering business results.
